Petition for Humane Medical Research

Hundreds of thousands of animals are killed every year just to provide body parts for medical research. Many scientists agree that test-tube studies with donated human tissue give more reliable results but that lack of availability prevents its widespread use. As a result, human tissue in research and testing remains the exception rather than the rule.

We the undersigned:

- Believe that human tissue should be used wherever possible to save animals and achieve more accurate results.
- Call upon the government to establish and co-ordinate a national network of human tissue banks to overcome the shortage of suitable human tissue.
